We?ve only reached the middle of March, but we?re already beginning to think that if there ever were an award for ?Breakthrough Tuner of the Year?, the British tuning company, Amari Design, would run away with it. In the six weeks that they?ve come to our attention, Amari Design has already released three strong tuning programs: the Lamborghini Gallardo Invidia Edition, the Range Rover Windsor Edition, and now, the Bentley Continental GT Evolution. The last of these projects is their latest offering, which is made all the more impressive considering that we didn?t even know these guys existed when the calendar struck 2011. For the Continental GT, Amari Design gave the car’s exterior a number of modifications, including a new front bumper, lip spoiler, a new hood, fenders, side skirts, panel extensions, a new rear bumper, rear diffuser, rear spoiler, and exhaust. All these components were made from high-quality plastic and carbon fiber. Inside the car, you’ll find plenty more improvements, including re-upholstered seats using Alcantara and Nappa leather and carbon fiber trimmings on the dash paneling.[...]
