Lumma Design has blown us away with a preview of their next aerodynamic kit for the 2013 BMW M6, which has been turned into a widebody racing car for the road. This is actually a body kit we are talking about here, one that will fit both the regular F12 M6 and the 6-Series coupe, and the bad news is that no powertrain upgrades are available at the moment. However, once you see those twin exhausts you’re hope will be restored.
