The BMW 1-Series M Coupe isn't just a popular car in Europe or America; it's got quite a following over in Asia too. So much so, in fact, that noted Japanese tuner Studie Ag has given the little M sports car a new tuning program that gives it a little M3 GTS flavor. Besides, it's already difficult to own an M3 GTS anyway considering that BMW only built 150 of them. However, if you're long on despair and short on hope, Studie Ag has the answer for you. The new styling kit for the 1-Series M Coupe features plenty of new components, including a custom-built vented hood, a matte black GTS rear wing, a matte black diffuser, and an Akrapovic exhaust with carbon fiber tips. In addition, Studie AG also dressed up the 1-Series M Coupe with a Fire Orange paint finish while a new set of gloss black wheels add a nice complement to the car's overall look.[...]
