Startech has unveiled their new styling packages for the Land Rover Range Rover and the Land Rover Freelander 2 (LR2).

The Range Rover receives LED daytime running lights, 22-inch Monostar IV light-alloy wheels, and dual trapezoidal stainless-steel exhaust tips. For the interior, Startech adds exclusive wood trim, leather door panels, and various other accessories. Customers can also turn their Range Rover into an "office on wheels" or a "mobile multimedia lounge with state-of-the-art communication technology."

On the other hand, the Freelander 2 features a revised front bumper (with integrated LED daytime running lights), a new rear apron, a stainless-steel sport exhaust system, and 20-inch Monostar IV light-alloy wheels. Inside, Startech replaces the dull interior with custom leather upholstery and bright trim accents.

The company is currently working on packages for the facelifted 2010 Range Rover and 2010 Range Rover Sport (two rendered images attached). While details are limited, Startech says they will feature an aerodynamic body kit, a modified suspension, 22-inch wheels, and a custom interior with leather and alcantara upholstery as well as precious-wood inlays.
