

Scion xD Tarmac by 0-60 Magazine

13/01/2011 05:50 by admin

The Rally America National Championship has long been a series dominated by the Subaru Impreza WRX STI. The Impreza's run was unceremoniously stopped last year by the Mitsubishi Lancer Evolution X, setting the stage for a highly competitive 2011 season. One car that's looking to gate crash the proceedings made its debut at the 2010 SEMA Auto Show courtesy of 0-60 Magazine. The popular auto mag unveiled the Scion xD Tarmac rally car that's expected to make its rally debut at the 2011 RANC. This isn't the first time 0-60 went to SEMA with their own custom-built Scion rally prototype, having done the same thing last year. This time around, the car will be driven by Christopher Duplessis, who, incidentally, is the brother of Forest Duplessis, DirtFish Rally School's chief instructor.[...]

Source: topspeed Tuning