

Lexus tabs American tuner, CEC, to build modified LF-A supercars

01/02/2011 00:08 by admin

Looks like the Lexus LF-A supercar will be having its own tuning program real soon. Recently, Lexus North America and Los Angeles-based auto tuner, CEC, struck a partnership where the latter will be tasked to create a tuning program for the LF-A supercar. The program will be limited to just three models with each car coming with a number of modifications that will be built specifically to the whims of each of the car owners. According to CEC, the whole scope of the tuning program will only cover aesthetic improvements, which means that the car's overall performance will be kept untouched.[...]

Source: topspeed Tuning