G-Power knows BMWs like the back of its hand, so it shouldn't come as a surprise to us that the German tuning firm took a shot at working up a BMW M5 Touring with some highly impressive performance packages. With a 5.0-liter V10 engine already under its hood, G-Power gave it a massive performance boost, courtesy of the tuning firm's SK III RS twin-turbocharger system. The result is a car that produces 750 horsepower and a top speed of 224 mph, a record-breaking speed that netted the car the title as the world's fastest estate sedan. Now that we've made this vehicle oh-so desirable for anybody who enjoys the BMW M5, it's worth noting that there's a certain level of exclusivity for G-Power's M5 Hurricane RS Routing. Of all the BMW M5 Touring models, only 1,025 units of this model will be equipped with G-Power's performance upgrade, which means that scooping up a piece of this car is going to be a mighty task, even for the lofty standards of the BMW M5.[...]
