Luxury tuner, Mansory, arrived at the Geneva Motor Show with vehicles such as the Siracusa and the Corneum, two heavily modified sports cars based on the Ferrari 458 Italia and the Mercedes SLS AMG. However, what they didn't display was their upcoming tuning package based on the new generation BMW 7-Series. The most powerful 7-series available - the 760Li - to be exact. So far, the Switzerland subsidiary of Mansory is keeping mum on some of the details, but we do know the tuner has applied massive air intakes, a new front bumper, a new type of mesh grille, horizontally-positioned LED daytime running lights, a redesigned apron with two large exhaust tips, a new rear bumper, a boot lid spoiler, and a roof spoiler to the luxury sedan. Oh, and we can't forget the easiest addition to any vehicle: a new set of wheels in a multi-spoke design.[...]
