

Mercedes SLS 63 Supersport GT by Kicherer

30/04/2011 01:55 by admin

German tuner, Kicherer, loves tuning Mercedes vehicles and apparently, they love sticking hot models on their projects for a photo shoot too. Fresh off their take on another SLS AMG Supersport a few months ago, Kicherer ? and their hot models ? is proud to introduce their new crowning glory, the SLS 63 Supersport GT. Decked in that unmistakable matte black foliation finish, the SLS 63 Supersport GT also comes with a rather curious shark-mouth, hand-made grille. We say curious because, well, we don?t like it, although Kicherer seemed to think that it added a sharper bite to the car?s looks so they decided to go with it. In any case, the modified SLS AMG was also given a new carbon front spoiler lip with a carbon fin set to go along with a set of the tuning company?s own three-piece RS-1 rims: 10J x 20? at the front and 11.5Jx21?. Save for the grille, the aerodynamic kit looks mighty impressive and it?s made even better by the fact that Kicherer also gave the car a performance upgrade, bumping up the car?s output to 621 horsepower and 516 lb/ft of torque. This allows the Mercedes to clock a 0-62 mph time of just 3.5 seconds with an electronically limited top speed of 199 mph.[...]

Source: topspeed