Well, that was quick. Just three days after unveiling the MINI Coupe, the firm's first-ever two-seater coupe model, and even though its flagship version won't be available to the public before autumn, the company presented the MINI John Cooper Works Coupe Endurance (yes, that's quite a mouthful, so we'll just call it JCW) racer. And, what's more, its public debut will be in one of the most demanding endurance races of the world, the Nürburgring 24 hours at the legendary Nordschleife, the place which Jackie Stewart has famously christened "the Green Hell".
