

Ferrari 458 "Italian Stallion" by Wheelsandmore

12/07/2011 00:36 by admin

It seems as though Wheelsandmore is never short of ideas when it comes to tuning projects, as evidenced by these fancy programs we've been getting lately. On the same day they introduced separate tune-ups for the Ferrari California and the Lamborghini Murcielago, the German tuning shop also dished out one for the Ferrari 458 Italia. It's called the "Italian Stallion", and appropriately so because Wheelsandmore's program offers all that - and more. No pun intended, by the way. For starters, the tuning firm gave the Ferrari supercar a two-tone design with black racing stripes running down the middle to go with a huge rear wing on the back of the car. Then there's also something that's right up their wheelhouse: a new set of fancy rims. For this program, Wheelsandmore chose to give the 458 Italia a set of its own 21" "6 Sporz" forged rims to go with 245/30/21 and 345/25/21 Hankook tires in the front and back of the car, respectively. The car also has a lift-up system at the front axle, providing a substantial hydraulic lift of about 40 mm to ensure that the car can clear any and all speed bumps that may come its way.

Source: topspeed