With the release of the first Dark Knight Rises trailer, it seemed appropriate to commemorate the occasion by showing you Batman's original cinematic vehicle. Of course, this one has been pumped up to turbocharged levels. Yes, we're talking about the original Batmobile that appeared in Tim Burton's Batman movies; the very same one that inspired modern-day iterations of the Caped Crusader's all-purpose vehicle. Only this time, it doesn't come with a prop engine like so many others. This one comes with something pretty bad ass: a turboshaft turbine engine that was sourced from a naval drone helicopter and produces an output of 385 horsepower. Pretty impressive, right?[...]
