Unless you're Michael Stoschek and have a Ferrari F430 Scuderia turned Lancia Stratos to play in, chances are you won't be able to ride in a brand new Lancia Stratos for anything short of an arm and leg. But all that's about to change thanks to the people over at Montenergy. The Italian tuning firm has come up with a body kit for the KTM X-Bow called the "Stratosferica." The name alone illustrates the tuning firm's ultimate goal; to make a Stratos from the more affordable street-homologated sports car. This transformation was achieved by putting a top on the once top-less track car and giving it the look, depending on how trained your eyes are to detail, of a Lancia Stratos. On top of the body kit, Montenergy is also offering a performance boost for the X-Bow, one that takes the output of its Audi-sourced 2.0-liter TFSI four-cylinder engine from the standard 237 horsepower to 310 ponies. For information's sake, that's more powerful than the most powerful X-Bow - the 300-horsepower X-Bow R - in the market.[...]
