There was never really any doubt that the new Porsche 911 was going to be one of the most anticipated cars of 2011. The question isn't so much as "is it going to be great?" more than it is "how great is it going to be?" That's the difference between a car like the 911 and pretty much everything else on the market. You don't question the former's credibility. You only ask yourself how you'll be able to afford one. For auto tuning companies, the same questions can be asked, albeit in a different context: "how soon can we build a program for it?" In the case of Russian tuner, TopCar, the project has already begun, despite the fact that the 911 has yet to make its worldwide debut. TopCar is already ahead of the curb to the extent that they already have sketches as to what their program for the 911 is going to look like.[...]
