

Mercedes and Infiniti to Share Platforms

15/09/2011 17:48 by admin

Daimler and Renault-Nissan have extended their part-sharing agreement, which means that Infiniti, Nissan's luxury division, will use Mercedes-Benz's MFA (modular front architecture) small vehicle platform (this is the architecture used by the second-generation B-Class) for a future MPV that is scheduled to go on sale in 2014, as autocar reports.

The MPV was previewed by the Etherea concept, which came to the world at last year's Geneva Auto Show. The vehicle was originally destined for the Eu... [...]

Source: autoevolution