Aftermarket companies have waited a long time for the Mercedes SLS AMG Roadster. If for nothing else, they just couldn't wait to get their hands on one to see what kind of tuning program they could make. At least one tuning company will agree to this because we already have the first tuning program for the SLS Roadster courtesy of Kicherer. In building the program for the supercar, Kicherer paid careful attention in not completely changing the overall essence of the car, although they did add a few carbon dress-ups to make it stand out as a Kicherer project. The most noticeable is the hand-made GT front grille, but many other fancy parts got added, including a new front spoiler, new side skirts, aerodynamic fins that were added onto the bonnet and on the wings, and a set of three-part, double-spoke 20" RS-1 lightweight wheels. Kicherer also installed a new coilover "Front Up" suspension system that improves the car's handling and a stainless steel exhaust with four oval end pipes with an integrated valve control, giving the driver free reign to choose the kind of exhaust tone he prefers.[...]
