

AC Schnitzer Unveils Customization Program for BMW 1-Series

22/09/2011 22:02 by admin

BMW has changed the formula for its rear-wheel drive hatchback a lot with the new 1-Series that has just hit the 'shelves' in Germany, and some tuners have already gotten to have a play with the 2012 model.

Getting to the point, AC Schnitzer has revealed a customization program, which includes new rims in their customary design, sized either 18 or 19 inches. There's not a lot in it at this point, but more options are sure to pop up in coming months.

Cosmetic changes include stickers [...]

Source: autoevolution