Over in Japan, a new tuning company is breaking into the auto tuning scene and they've prepared a nice program for the Lamborghini Gallardo as their very first project. The tuning company is called BenSopra and they've only been open for a few months. Ever mindful of the fierce competition within the industry, the Japanese tuning company wanted their first project to be something people would remember - even if the whole program isn't so much about over-the-top craziness as it is about subtle styling cues that add an element of sublime exclusivity to the Italian supercar.[...]
