With SEMA Show just around the corner more automakers have started to reveal the first details on their models to be displayed in Las Vegas. Ford for example has announced a pretty impressive line-up for the show: seven customized Focus and three Fiesta. Just to start with of course. The first model set to be displayed at the SEMA Show is the Stage 3 Focus by Roush Performance Products. The model offers several powertrain upgrades including a Roush R900 TVS supercharger, Roush modified high-flow induction system and Roush dual-exit high- performance exhaust. However, we don't know just yet the final output for the car.[...]
