The 2011 SEMA Auto Show is fixing to become an automotive giveaway bonanza after numerous aftermarket tuners have made it known that they were giving away a number of the cars that will be in attendance at the world's largest auto aftermarket event. The latest to throw their name into the raffle-hat is Bosch Auto Parts, which will be raffling of a one-of-a-kind 2011 Ford Mustang RTR that was custom-built by no less than drifting champion Vaughn Gittin, Jr and Ice Nine Group, noted builders of limited edition production vehicles. The Mustang Bosch Iridium Edition RTR is based on the Mustang RTR package and comes with plenty of aerodynamic and performance modifications that makes it a true one-of-a-kind muscle car. The car will carry some carbon fiber body panels, a custom BASF paint finish, and custom one-off badging, among other things. The muscle car will also have a new front splitter, rocker splitters, an RTR rear diffuser, a stamped aluminum rear spoiler, Ford Racing shocks, Ford Racing calibration, Ford Racing mufflers, cross-drilled and slotted rotors, and Bosch Iridium spark plugs.[...]
