The Nissan GT-R is a car that can fill the Internet alone, with one of its most important sides being the aftermarket-related one. Even though Nissan doesn't want its supercar to be touched by tuners, they are more than happy to play with Godzilla.

The latest GT-R project, which is also an extreme one, comes from Japanese company BenSopra, which has announced a monster GT-R for the 2012 Tokyo Auto Show.

So, what will we meet in January? a 1,000 hp Godzilla. That's right, the twin-turbo 3.8... [...]
