

Chevrolet Camaro ZL1 Carbon Concept: 2011 SEMA's Dark Side

28/10/2011 18:03 by admin

The Camaro has always been a bad boy's car, but it seems that GM wants to take things even further for the upcoming 2011 edition of the SEMA show, introducing the Camaro ZL1 Carbon Concept.

We are talking about a ZL1-based development, so the performance sits at supercar level, with everything being wrapped in a layer of carbon fiber. The concept uses the new Ashen Gray paint, which will be available on all 2012 Camaro models.

Here are the main features of the Camaro ZL1 Carbon Concept: [...]

Source: autoevolution