Taking a break from the Scion iQ lovefest at the 2011 SEMA Auto Show is this Scion tC that was built and designed by Dynamic. Called the 'Gruppe S,' the aftermarket company was able to bring a sprightly tC coupe and turn it into a race-ready sportster that's primed and ready for some tarmac action. The exterior modifications include a KW 3-way race coilover suspension, a carbon hood and carbon trunk from Seibon, a front carbon splitter and GT wing from APR, a 5-axis lip spoiler, a one-piece roof from Papadakis Racing, and a set of 18" Hankook wheels with a TRD Big Brake Kit. As for the interior, the upgrades include Recaro SPG Hans seats with Sparco race harnesses and a custom-built 6-point race cage. Under its hood, Dynamic added a GReddy turbo kit and a front mounted cooler to the Scion tC's 2.5-liter inline four-cylinder engine, spiking the coupe's output to unimaginable heights.[...]
