Galpin Auto Sports is bringing the rain, the pain, and a whole lot of noise to the 2011 SEMA Auto Show. With a total of 12 new customized models, GAS is primed and ready for some aftermarket action in Las Vegas. Leading the way is the 2012 Ford Mustang Shelby GT500 Super Snake, the modded super muscle car that was treated to an extensive aerodynamic facelift and, more importantly, some performance tweaking that will blow the lid off of the Las Vegas Convention Center. We'll proceed the ceremonies and tell you about Galpin's very own hand-made steel body panels that were fitted into the GT500 Super Snake, adding nine inches to the car's width. To give the car a little old-school Super Snake touch, Galpin custom painted the exterior with a Black paint finish with Tungsten Grey racing stripes, giving that added touch of exclusivity that only a GT500 Super Snake can have. On top of all that, the one-off muscle car also received a new set of lightweight aluminum wheels with their own Super Snake center caps wrapped in Pirelli tires, as well as a set of electric exhaust cutouts.[...]
