The Tokyo Motor Show is very close to opening its gates, but before traveling so far, we also have to pay attention to the Essen Motor Show, which is scheduled to kick off tomorrow.

One of the companies that will be very active at the tuning event is Brabus, who plans to give us is three world premieres at the show.

The German tuner has released two teasers for the event: the first one shows an SLS AMG Roadster project, while the second could be a development destined for the new ML63 AMG... [...]
