Expect the 2012 Mercedes M-Class to become one spoiled child of the tuning world, as more and more aftermarket developers are announcing modification packages for the German SUV.

The latest development of this kind comes from Lorinser, which has released a teaser image of an upcoming exterior package for the M-Class. The front bumper gets redesigned, receiving bold elements, we also get a new front grille, front fenders with air vents, side skirts that use air intakes, as well as a set of cus... [...]
