Anabolicar Magazine is one of Germany's biggest supercar magazines so obviously, they had to have a presence at the just finished 2011 Essen Motor Show. What we didn't know was that they were bringing a humdinger of a project in the form of a tuned-up BMW Z4. The show car, which was built specifically for the purpose of displaying it at Essen, comes with plenty of aerodynamic and performance enhancements that compliments the M Package the car already has. The exterior of the Z4 is highlighted by a Green reptile skin finish that was worked on by KK-Cocoon. In addition to that, the Z4 Anabolicar also has a new KW coil-over suspension, an Eisenmann exhaust system, a lowered M-chassis, and a new set of black, 19" OZ Racing alloy wheels. Meanwhile, the modifications for the interior include new M sports seats, a new M steering wheel, and a voice activated navigation system.[...]
