German tuning company, Vorsteiner ,has come out with a new aerodynamic package for the BMW X5M and if we do say so ourselves, the German tuning company has done it again. Incidentally, the new X5M program comes a year after the company unveiled a similar program for the SUV's big brother, the X6M. Coincidence, or they always appear to be busy this time of the year? In any case, the addition of Vorsteiner's new aero components give a fashionable touch to an already classed-up BMW SUV. Among the changes in tow include a new add-on front spoiler, a vented racing hood, and a new rear differ. What makes these materials unique from the rest of the X5M programs we've seen in the past is that the components are made from Carbon Fiber Autoclave Pre-Preg. This material adds more strength and durability to the material, yet retains the same high-class look that's usually attached to anything Vorsteiner does. In addition, the German tuners also added a new set of alloy wheels to complete the SUV's classy new look.[...]
