Japanese aftermarket developer Wurde is a company that, among others, likes to play with European toys, with the company's latest project of this kind targeting the Porsche Panamera S.

We are talking about a body kit for the German four-door coupe, which aims to bring a more dynamic image to the vehicle. The list of custom parts consists of a front fascia, headlight ornaments, a redesigned bonnet, new side skirts, a rear diffuser, a set of panels for the rear doors, as well as a rear spoiler...
