The Land Rover Defender has recently received an aftermarket present from British tuner Kahn and the company is now back to complete the initiative, offering us the full image gallery for the development.

The off-roader has received its own line of rims, which can be ordered in a 16- or an 18-inch size, using a complex multi-spoke design that was created to suit the rugged lines of the vehicle. We have to mention that these feature OEM bolts.

Here's what Kahn had to say about the developme... [...]
