The Audi Q7 has always been a bit too large for many people's tastes and British tuner Kahn now wants to do something about this. The company has released a complex aftermarket package for the vehicle, with the exterior modifications aiming to disguise the proportions.

Thus, the German SUV has been gifted with new wings, which feature air vents, front fascia add-on elements, a vented rear bumper, a generously-sized roof wing, as well as muscular wheel arches. In addition to that, the tuner ad... [...]
