

Ford Mustang Konquistador by Reifen Koch

15/03/2012 23:41 by admin

While awaiting the debut of the new generation Mustang, German tuner, Reifen Koch, started its work on a Mustang that debuted 40 years after the original: the 2005 Mustang V. Their package is called the "Konquistador" and features the 4.6 liter V8 engine with an impressive output of 414 HP. This is a 114 HP increase over the car's standard 300 HP. The muscle car was given a mean, exterior upgrade worthy of being called a conqueror. It includes a Cervini body kit that consists of new bumpers and side sills, a new bonnet, and a small rear spoiler. The kit continues with the addition of a specially featured exhaust system which includes side pipes at both ends, KW-coilovers with electrically lifting axles, and an HLS (Hydraulic Lift System) Kit. The entire setup goes for ?8,000 (or about $10,450 at the current rates). The tuner has also installed a new set of 20" Gotham wheels combined with a high performance Brembo braking system, which will run customers an additional ?4,500 ( or about $5,875 at the current rates).[...]

Source: topspeed