We've seen some fancy tuning programs from Wald International, particularly their Black Bison line-up. Now it looks like they've added another ace into the family with the unveiling of their new Black Bison program for the Mercedes CLS-Class. The aggressive body kit on the CLS-Class includes a new front bumper, new front wings, side vents, a trunk lid spoiler, and large diffusers. Similarly, the grilles on the Merc have also been revised while the side skirts and the lowered suspension making for a more aggressive stance. For all of these modifications, the most significant inclusion into the car are the blacked out head- and tail-lights, which increases the overall bad-ass look of the car.[...]
