The Top Marques Monaco is without question one of the most important dates on the tuning calendar, particularly because of the location it's held at every year. Nothing speaks more to millionaires throwing their money around than Monte Carlo, and some of the best tuners use that platform to show off their latest programs. Now that the 2012 Top Marques Monaco is drawing closer, we're beginning to see a host of tuners preview some of the cars they're bringing to the event. One in particular is Mansory, which only recently wowed us at Geneva with not one, not two, not three, but four programs for some of the finest exotics in the land. For Monaco, it appears that the Swiss tuner will be bringing their very first program for the Ferrari 458 Italia Spyder, appropriately called "Monaco." Now, in the interest of full disclosure, Mansory hasn't come out with anything about their Top Marques offerings and this video of what looks like a preview image of the 458 Italia Spyder Monaco is all but that.[...]
