

Mercedes SL500 by Brabus

19/04/2012 00:50 by admin

It's been close to four years since noted Mercedes tuner Brabus got their hands on a new Mercedes SL Roadster. But now that Mercedes has introduced the new 2013 SL, Brabus wasted little time getting re-acclimated with the drop-top sports car. With the delivery of the new SL500 still fresh, Brabus has yet to work their magic on the car. But that doesn't mean that we can't expect the usual array of goodies that has become a staple from the Mercedes tuner extraordinaire. What that means is we're expecting nothing less than 'spectacular' from these guys. A new wide body kit should be in the offering, as are suspension modifications, a dressed-up interior, and a comprehensive performance upgrade that only Brabus can build. We have extremely high expectations for these guys knowing that they can deliver the goods without even breaking a sweat.[...]

Source: topspeed