

Lamborghini Murcielago "Rapid Response Unit" by Martino Auto Concepts

02/05/2012 13:32 by admin

If for some reason you see a Lamborghini Murcielago look the part of a fire department vehicle complete with emergency lights on its roof, don't confuse it for a novelty car; it was actually built to be. At least according to the dudes that made it, the "world's only Lamborghini Rapid Response Unit." Yep. You just the words "Lamborghini" and "Rapid Response Unit" in the same quotation marks. This Murcielago was built by Martino Auto Concepts from Glen Cove, New York as a way to pay homage to the Glen Cove Fire Department for their 175th year of service to the community. The Murcielago comes dressed to look like a service vehicle, complete with GFCD badging - that's the Glen Cove Fire Department - and a plethora of fire department-relative livery. Even better, it also has a set of emergency lights on its roof, adding more flavor to what we obviously think is already a fantastic Italian supercar.[...]

Source: topspeed