The Ford Mustang 3.7 V6 doesn't get as much love as its 5.0-liter counterpart, and for the most part, the less attention is warranted. But every so often, a V6 Mustang comes out of the woodwork and makes a name for itself. One tuner that has found a soft spot for the V6 Mustang is ProCharger, which built a supercharger kit for the lesser 'Stang. The supercharger kit gave the Mustang a dramatic increase in output from the standard 305 horsepower and 280 lb/ft of torque all the way up to 475 horsepower from the muscle car's 3.6-liter V6 engine. Taking that one step further is Central Florida Motorsports, which fitted ProCharger's supercharger kit on the Mustang and proceeded to smash the existing quarter-mile record - one that it already owned - for a 2011+ Mustang V6, covering the distance in just 11.20 seconds at 119 mph.[...]
