Tuners release new projects with more and more impressive specs, and the on-paper data looks great for most of them, but how can we really be sure that these projects are balanced? One good answer for this question is set to arrive this weekend, when the sport auto-Tuner GP 2012 event will be held. This is a race that will allow aftermarket developers to show us just how quick their cars are, with the vehicles set to compete against each... [...]
