

Ford Mustang Widow Maker by Ultimate Bad Boy

29/05/2012 02:44 by admin

We're not quite sure how appropriate the name of this customized Ford Mustang Shelby really is - Widow Maker? - but hey, if that's what they want to call it, more power to them. Curious name notwithstanding, this heavily modified 2012 Ford Mustang Shelby GT500 is the stuff where stallion dreams are made of. Tuned by the spectacular folks over at Ultimate Bad Boy, the American muscle car has been effectively 'roided up - in a good way! - to deliver a staggering 1,100-horsepower output and 850 lb/ft of torque from its 5.4-liter supercharged V8 engine. How exactly did Ultimate Bad Boy accomplish that? Well, for starters, the US tuner added 1,000cc fuel injectors, twin cooling fans, advanced traction control, and voice control just to spice things up. Ultimate Bad Boy also gave the muscle car a full UBB carbon body kit, a 200-mph speedo, suspension coil-overs, a new set of 19" split alloy rims, Brembo brakes, Recaro seats, a glass roof, laser jammers, and window tint.[...]

Source: topspeed