The BMW 1-Series M Coupe may be the baby brother in the BMW M family, but that doesn't mean that it's a pushover. On the contrary, the 1M has become quite a fan favorite, proving that you don't need to spend more than you can in order to enjoy the thrills of owning a sports car. With 340 horsepower on tap, the 1M can definitely hold its own against some of its contemporaries. But even if it's got enough ponies to make us all swoon, there's always a way to get more out of it. That's where Alpha-N Performance comes into the picture. The German tuning firm recently showed us what they can do to a BMW 335i when they released a program for the car a few weeks ago. Now, it's the 1M Coupe's turn. Calling it the 1M RS, Alpha-N Performance fitted the little BMW sports coupe with a comprehensive aero kit that features a wide range of components, including a ventilated carbon hood, front fascia add-on carbon lower spoilers, carbon roof, carbon luggage lid spoiler, and a carbon rear fascia diffuser. Likewise, there's also a new set of 19" OZ Superforgiata rims wrapped in Michelin tires and a MAC high-performance braking system added into the program.[...]
