We're thinking that Azfal Kahn and his people at Kahn Design needed a little break from all the Range Rover programs they've been releasing for the past couple of months. What better way to take on a fresh project than by presenting a new styling program for the Ferrari 458 Italia. In developing the new modifications for the Italian super car, Kahn Design went for an aerodynamic body kit that features new front and rear bumper sections, both of which have been finished in a matte pearl gray finish. The program also consists of a rear diffuser, side skirts, and even a roof that also carries the same matte pearl gray paint finish. Rounding out the upgrades are a new set of 21" and 22" forged alloy wheels that come with the same - you guessed it - matte pearl gray shade. The new wheels are then complemented by new ceramic brakes and yellow brake calipers.[...]
