Back in the late 1950s, Ford and GM found a new niche to battle upon - the 2-door coupe utility segment. It all started with the Custom-based Ford Ranchero in 1957 and it became a full-size duel when GM introduced the Chevrolet El Camino. They're quite popular today, especially those muscly 1970s Chevelle-based El Caminos and, if we may add, we wouldn't say no to a 1967 Ford Fairlane-based Ranchero. But how about an Eu... [...]
