Brabus, the well known Mercedes specialist, has unveiled today at the Geneva Motor Show the new BRABUS Mercedes ML63 biturbo, based on the Mercedes AMG ML 63. Their modified car will set new standards for SUV performance and styling. Powered by a 6.3L V8 engine which delivers 650 HP, this ML could reach a top speed of 310 km/h and it has an incredible acceleration time for its size: just 4.2 seconds from 0 to 100. Engineers from Brabus spent almost two years to improve this car's engine with twin turbochargers and the new system added over 140 HP. The twin turbo system also includes a large intercooler, a dual flow intake manifold and high performance free-flow metal catalysts. Only the high performance B63 Biturbo engine costs 69,800 Euros but it offers more power than any other SUV in the world.

Another unique features for this vehicle category are the modified seven speed Speedshift 7G-Tronic automatic gearbox and permanent four wheel drive. In addition to these performance upgrades Brabus equipped this ML with their elegant Widestar package which has new fender flares on front and rear axle. The new front spoiler bumper has three strikingly styled air inlets, auxiliary headlights and daytime running lights. The new body kit also includes door trim components and rocker panels which create a perfect transition between the car's front and rear side. The rear bumper has an integrated diffuser with cutouts for the chromed plated tailpipes of the new stainless steel exhaust system designed by Brabus. This SUV also received a rear spoiler and three piece Brabus Monolog E Platinum Edition wheels specially designed for this car equipped with high performance tires. Brabus also installed a control module which will modify the car's suspension to lower its height by 30 mm and a high performance braking system to improve the car's handling and stability. They had to modify the car's interior too and this powerful ML features exclusive interior highlights. It has stainless steel scuff plates with illuminated Brabus logo, a new sport steering wheel and a fully leather interior made from finest Mastik and Alcantara leathers. The BRABUS Mercedes ML63 biturbo price starts at 190,602 Euros.
