The Japanese tuner WALD International might not have any boundaries in what they pick to work on, but here's another proof that they have an exquisite taste! Although the regular 5-series BMWs are not very good looking, but the M5 with its lower profile and flared arches and massive bumpers and quad exhaust is in a way different league. So the job of upgrading this handsome is tricky, but Wald, by sticking to their simple recipe, has pull it off quit well.

Wald decorations for the M5's body include new front spoilers and some garnish around the air intakes and new fog lights, taller side skirts, bootlid spoiler, a new rear diffuser and new tailpipes as a sign of the car's DTM exhaust system.

Wald also offers their Mahora wheels with the M5 available in 19 or 20-inches.
