

Nissan 370Z by Senner

16/10/2009 15:30 by admin

Senner Tuning has a new preliminary tuning package for the Nissan 370 Z Coupe. The Whitelady, a name reminiscent of Z car heritage like the Fairlady, is already a competent tool. But we know there's always more to squeeze out. Using the same 3.7-litre V6 Senner has upped power by 15kW (21hp) from the standard 244kW (331hp) to 259kW (352hp). The engineers did this by installing a new Invidia stainless steel exhaust system with improved air flow and larger tailpipes (101mm diameter). More performance is currently being developed. Technical changes include a lower suspension system - 50mm up front and 45mm at the rear, adjustable compression damping and an increased track width. The wheels are light alloys measuring 9x20 at the front and 10x20 at the rear. They come in either Racing White or Matt Black Polish. Fitted tyres measure 245/35 R20 and 275/30 R20 respectively.

Senner is currently working on a body kit that consists of carbon fibre accessories, a front apron, a rear apron and a rear spoiler. Stay tuned.

Source: worldcarfans.com